Critical Edition and Philological Analysis of the Isa 53 Text Based on the Coptic Manuscript of sa 52 (M 568) and Other Coptic Manuscripts of the Sahidic Dialect and the Greek Text of the Septuagint

Abstract: The article is a critical edition, translation, and philological analysis of the Isa 53 text, prepared on the basis of the Coptic manuscript of sa 52 and other available manuscripts, written in the Sahidic dialect. Its first part outlines general information about the section of codex sa 52 (M 568) that contains the analyzed text. This is followed by a list and brief description of other manuscripts that contain at least some verses from sa 53. The most important part of the article is the presentation of the Sahidic text and its translation into English. The differences identified between the Coptic translation and the Greek Septuagint were presented in a table. It includes, for example, additions and omissions in the Sahidic translation, lexical changes, and semantic differences. The final part of the article aims to clarify more challenging philological issues observed either in the Coptic text itself or in its relation to the Greek text of the LXX.

Keywords: Coptic language, Sahidic dialect, Book of Isaiah, Deutero-Isaiah, sa 52 (M 568), CLM 205, edition of Isa 53

Chapter 53 of the Book of Isaiah is one of the most quoted passages in the Old Testament. It contains the text that is commonly known as the Fourth Song of the Servant of the Lord. It begins at the end of chapter 52 (vv. 13–15) and fills the whole of chapter 53. Due to practical reasons (to avoid splitting chapter 52), the Coptic text of the verses Isa 52,13–15 has already been compiled.1 The subject of this article will be the critical edition, translation, and philological analysis of the subsequent verses of the Song that fill Isa 53.

The first six verses contain the words of people who report the tragic fate of the Servant with deep compassion. At the same time, they admit in the first person, that they “did not esteem him” (v. 3). The Servant of the Lord “carried our sorrow” (v. 4), undertaking substitutionary atonement.

Verses 7 to 10 quote the words of the Prophet who describes details of the passion. He emphasizes the Servant’s meekness, calm, and silence in the face of suffering (v. 7).

1 The text is currently in preparation for printing in the scientific journal The Biblical Annals.
Following his imprisonment, the Servant is cut off from the land of the living and stricken to his death (v. 8). He had his grave made with the wicked (v. 9). All this suffering was the will of Yahweh, but at the same time, it was undertaken voluntarily (v. 10).

The final two verses of the Song (11 and 12) are about the effects of the expiatory offering. The Servant’s death “shall justify many” (v. 11) and the justified will belong to him (v. 12). Verse 12 is the final verse of the Song and, at the same time, the closing of chapter 53.

This article can be regarded as a continuation of the chapters of the Book of Isaiah compiled so far. The edition of Isa 53 will be based mainly on the Sahidic manuscript numbered sa 52 in Karlheinz Schüssler’s compilation (M 568 in the Leo Depuydt compilation), which is to be found under the number CLM 205 in the modern electronic database of the Archaeological Atlas of Coptic Literature. This work is based on both the photographic edition (referred to as a facsimile), provided by the Vatican Library, and the microfilm, provided by the Morgan Library in New York. For the last few years, black and white photographs of that Library’s Coptic collection have been available on the website: https://archive.org/details/PhantouLibrary. Photographs in color have also been published as part of the Digital Edition of the Coptic Old Testament (DECOT) project on the website: http://coptot.manuscriptroom.com/manuscript-workspace, where our manuscript is to be found under the number ID 622008.

Page numbers in this compilation will be provided according to the numbering of the facsimile, which is to be found in the Vatican Library. Since the numbering on the Digital Edition of the Coptic Old Testament (DECOT) website does not

7 However, caution needs to be exercised here, as the transcription of the text contains some errors. These can be found in the following places:
   – on p. 109 (f. 54r, Copt. Πιά) in line 11 of the right column, the sa 52 manuscript contains the following entry: ΕΤΝΣΗ. The DECOT transcription contains one more vowel and reads: ΕΤΕΝΣΗ.
   – on p. 110 (f. 54v, Copt. Πιβ) in line 29 of the left column in the DECOT transcription we find the following entry: ΜΠΑΑΟΟΣ, while the sa 52 manuscript reads ΜΠΑΑΑΟΟΣ.
The cited examples of errors in the DECOT transcription can be verified on the website: https://coptot.manuscriptroom.com/manuscript-workspace (access 19.03.2023).
correspond to the facsimile edition, this article will also provide the original Coptic page numbers to avoid ambiguity.

The following study combines features of both the diplomatic edition of manuscript sa 52 (M 568) and of its critical edition. In addition to the preferred manuscript sa 52 from the Pierpont Morgan collection, editions of all other currently available Coptic manuscripts in the Sahidic dialect, containing at least some verses from Isa 53 will also be considered. In the critical apparatus (indicated by an exclamation mark in superscript: !) a reading more akin to the Greek text of the Septuagint will be suggested.

Critical edition and philological analysis of the selected fragment will be carried out according to the order adopted in the study of the earlier chapters of the Book of Isaiah. It will therefore include the following elements: 1) a general description of the pages of sa 52 manuscript containing the text of Isa 53, 2) an edition of the Coptic text on the basis of the sa 52 manuscript taking other available witnesses into account, 3) English translation, 4) a list of disparities between the Greek text of LXX and its Coptic translation, presented in a table, 5) an analysis of more challenging philological phenomena observed in the Coptic fragment of Isa 53.

1. General Information about Isa 53 in sa 52 Manuscript

The text of Isa 53 begins in line 9 of the right column on page 109 of the facsimile (f. 54r, Copt. r_i_a), and ends in line 2 of the left column on page 111 (f. 55r, Copt. r_i_b). Thus, the text of chapter 53 is less than three columns long.

As was observed in the compilation of earlier fragments, the writing material was not selected with great care. On page 109 (f. 54r, Copt. r_i_a) in line 10 of the right column, which is exactly where the Isa 53 chapter begins, one can even see a small perforation. The same perforation is also to be seen in line 10 of the left column on page 110 (f. 54v, Copt. r_i_b). A perforation is also visible on the right-hand margin of the same page 110, around the 12th and 13th lines of the text. Since it is located outside of the column, it does not affect the letters.

The columns containing the Isa 53 text consist of a similar number of lines. In the left column on page 110 (f. 54v, Copt. r_i_b) we have 33 lines, while in the right column on page 109 (f. 54r, Copt. r_i_a) and in the right column on the page 110 (f. 54v, Copt. r_i_b) there are 34 lines.

In two places in our text, some words were written under the columns. It is likely that the scribe wanted to complete a logical unit without having to move a part of the word to the next page. This phenomenon can be observed on page:

- 109 (f. 54r, Copt. r_i_a), where the letters ΠΛΥΓΗ that form the word ΟΥΠΛΥΓΗ with an indefinite article, were written under the right column,
Throughout the whole of the sa 52 manuscript, one can notice enlarged initial letters extending beyond the columns of the text on the left. They are indicative of an attempt to logically divide the content. They appear in places near which a new thought begins. The enlarged initial letters are often accompanied by symbols that can be regarded as ornamental elements. These take a variety of forms. Sometimes they take the form of five dot punctuation, which is the case, for example, on page 109 (f. 54r, Copt. ꞌε.carousel). In other places, they take shapes that resemble a heart or a leaf (so-called coronis), which can be seen on page 110 (f. 54v, Copt. ꞌε.carousel) on the left-hand side of the left column. Even if the above symbols had an ornamental function, it has to be noted that their shape is fairly primitive and does not show much effort on the part of the scribe to prepare their manuscript with care.

The text of the sa 52 manuscript was written in black ink. The enlarged ornament letters, written on the left-hand side of the columns, were later reworked in red. It is difficult to determine whether the red ink was used by the original scribe or applied later.

The text of Isa 53 includes a few places where some letters have been omitted. In line 26 of the right column on page 109 (f. 54r, Copt. ꞌε.carousel) the scribe wrote two letters αγ, while the correct spelling here would have been the conjunction αγω. On page 110 (f. 54v, Copt. ꞌε.carousel), meanwhile, in line 31 of the left column we find the notation ΝΜΤΟΝΗΡΟΣ with the initial letter Ν written twice. The correct spelling would be ΝΜΤΟΝΗΡΟΣ. Similar dittographies were identified on previous pages of the sa 52 manuscript.

In the text of Isa 53, the nomina sacra appear a few times. One can notice the lack of consistency in their spelling. For example, on page 109 (f. 54r, Copt. ꞌε.carousel) in lines 9 and 10 of the right column (Isa 53:1) we can read the full form ΠΧΟΕΙΣ, while on page 110 (f. 54v, Copt. ꞌε.carousel), in the fourth line of the right column (Isa 53:10) we only find the abbreviation ΠΟΟΣ, which should take the form of ΠΧΟΣ in the Sahidic dialect. The inconsistency in the spelling of the nomina sacra has been noted many times in the sa 52 manuscript.

8 This spelling of the nomen sacrum is characteristic of the Fayyumic dialect (see Crum, Coptic Dictionary, 787b).

9 On the DECOT site, the nomen sacrum was misread as ΠΟΟΣ (see https://coptot.manuscriptroom.com/manuscript-workspace/?docID=622008&fbclid=IwAR3TDTeECwv0RaXyDc0EgFIU6uZ9dFQ3ynkve0F XCgEV2hK7AQAqDM_-XL8 [access 15.06.2023]).
2. List of Manuscripts Containing the Text of Isa 53 in the Sahidic Dialect of the Coptic Language

Fragments of chapter 53 of the Book of Isaiah can be found in a few other manuscripts, which are less complete than sa 52. With regard to the naming of the manuscripts, precedence will be given to the designations used in Schüssler’s study. References to electronic collections will be provided where possible. At least some verses of the text of Isa 53 are to be found in the following manuscripts:

Sa 48: papyrus codex, held in the Bibliotheca Bodmeriana in Geneva, designated as Papyrus Bodmer XXIII. Contains the text of Isa 47:1–51:17 and Isa 52:4–66:24. The manuscript is dated between 375–450. Due to its early origins, it is an invaluable aid in the edition of parts of the Book of Deutero-Isaiah and the entire Book of Trito-Isaiah. The manuscript was edited by Rodolphe Kasser in 1965. In the electronic database, Papyrus Bodmer XXIII was designated as CLM 40 and LDAB 108542. The manuscript has already been used in the compilation of earlier chapters of Deutero-Isaiah.

Sa 105. The folio forms part of a parchment lectionary with biblical texts from both the Old and New Testaments. It is kept in Vienna in the Österreichische Nationalbibliothek under the number K 9880. It contains the text of Isa 63:7–11; 52:13–15 and the text of Isa 53:1–3 that occupies the right column on the page identified with the Coptic number $\text{PKB} (= 122)$, which is of interest to the present study. The manuscript was included in Arthur Vaschalde’s list as SER 25. The text was edited by Carl Wessely. An electronic edition can also be found on the DECOT website, where the manuscript appears under the number sa 298L (ID 620298). This manuscript has already been used for the compilation of Isa chapters 51–52.

Sa 108\footnote{More detailed information on the manuscript is available in Schüssler, Sa 93–120, 49–69.}: this manuscript is a bilingual (Coptic-Arabic) lectionary containing the readings for the Holy Week. It comes from the White Monastery in Sohag. Currently, it is kept in the Vatican Library.\footnote{See Bąk, Proto-Isaiah in the Sahidic Dialect, 364–365; Bąk, Isa 40, 77–78; Bąk, Isa 46–48, 605–606.} Its full shelfmark is Rom, BV, Borgia copto 109, cass. XXIII, fasc. 99. It was established that the manuscript dates from the period between the 12th and 14th centuries. The manuscript has already been used several times for editions of earlier chapters of Proto- and Deutero-Isaiah.\footnote{Ciasca, Sacrorum Bibliorum fragmenta, II, 241–243.} The passage Isa 52:13–53:12 was edited by Augustinus Ciasca, in whose manuscript it was designated as IC.\footnote{Amélineau, “Fragments de la version thebaine,” 126.} This study will use the edition of Isa 53:1–12a. Verses 1–6 have also been published by Émile Amélineau.\footnote{See https://coptot.manuscriptroom.com/manuscript-workspace/?docID=620016 (access 20.03.2023).} Photographs of the manuscript and its electronic edition are available on the DECOT website.\footnote{See https://atlas.paths-erc.eu/manuscripts/3288 (access 20.03.2023).}

The manuscript was included in Arthur Vaschalde’s list as part of Collection Borgia and was numbered Z. 99 CA.\footnote{See https://atlas.paths-erc.eu/manuscripts/991 (access 18.03.2023).} On the DECOT website, the lectionary appears as sa 16L (ID 620016).\footnote{See https://atlas.paths-erc.eu/manuscripts/107819 (LDAB 107819).} In the catalog of the Archaeological Atlas of Coptic Literature, it is also known as CLM 3288.\footnote{See https://www.trismegistos.org/text/107819 (access 18.03.2023).}

Sa 187: is a fragment of a parchment card whose full catalog name is Oxford, BL, Copt. g. 9. Paleography dates the manuscript to the 5th century. The text is very difficult to read.\footnote{See Kahle, Bala’izah, 332.} The manuscript was edited by Paul Kahle.\footnote{Kahle, Bala’izah, 332–333.} The manuscript was included in Walter Till’s list.\footnote{Till, “Coptic Biblical Texts,” 228.} On the Digital Edition of the Coptic Old Testament (DECOT) website, the manuscript is cataloged as sa 2139 (ID 622139). A transcription of the text can also be found there.\footnote{See https://coptot.manuscriptroom.com/manuscript-workspace/?docID=622139 (access 20.03.2023).} In other electronic systems, the parchment is also known as CLM 991\footnote{See https://coptot.manuscriptroom.com/manuscript-workspace/?docID=620016 (access 20.03.2023).} and TM 107819 (LDAB 107819).\footnote{See https://atlas.paths-erc.eu/manuscripts/991 (access 18.03.2023).}

Manuscript sa 187 on its recto side contains the text of Isa 52:14b–15; 53:1–2a, and, on the verso side, Isa 53:2b–4. The present study will use the verso side. This manuscript has already been used for the compilation of chapters 51–52 of Isa.\footnote{The text is currently in preparation for printing in the journal The Biblical Annals.}
Sa 211\(^1\): paper lectionary from the White Monastery in Sohag. The catalog name of the manuscript is Oxford, BL, Cod. XX (Huntington no. 5). It was estimated that it likely dates back to the 12th/13th century.\(^38\)

In Arthur Vaschalde’s list, the manuscript is listed under the name Bodl. (Hunt. 5).\(^39\) This is also where information about Adolf Erman’s edition of passages from the Old Testament is found.\(^40\) The published verses belong to different books of the Old Testament and come from four manuscripts, which Erman designated with letters: A, B, C, D.\(^41\) The text of Isa 53:7b–12, which is of relevance to this study, comes from a manuscript designated as D. References to Bodl. (Hunt. 5) were taken into account in the critical apparatus of Augustinus Ciasca, where it appears as “D. edit. ab Erman” and later as “D”.\(^42\) This paper will take Erman’s edition into account.\(^43\) The manuscript has already been used in the edition of the text of Isa 49–50.\(^44\)

In the online catalog available on the DECOT website, the manuscript was designated as sa 292L (ID 620292). An electronic edition of the manuscript can also be accessed there.\(^45\)

Sa 212\(^1\)·9: extensive parchment codex, written on more than 300 pages. It was found in the White Monastery in Sohag, although it was most likely written in the Fayyum area. Currently, its various fragments are kept in London, Paris, Rome, and Vienna. In Schüssler’s compilation, they were cataloged as sa 212\(^1\).\(^46\) It is estimated that they date back to the period between the 9th and 11th centuries. The codex contains fragments of various books of the Old Testament. The only extant fragment of the Deutero-Isaiah is the Isa 53:3–12, which will be used in this compilation. In Schüssler’s catalog, it was designated as sa 212\(^1\)·9, while its full name is Paris, BN, Copte 12919 fol. 1\(^4\).\(^47\) The text was edited by Gaston Maspero.\(^48\) In the Archaeological Atlas of Coptic Literature catalog the manuscript is also known as CLM 456.\(^49\) Its name on the DECOT website is Sa 2148L (ID 622148).

CLM 3469: is a codex found by Polish archaeologists in 2005, referred to as Qurna Isaiah.⁵¹ It is currently kept in the Coptic Museum in Cairo under the number 13446. The manuscript is a papyrus codex. It contains the text of Isa 47:14–66:24. Alin Suciu estimates that the codex dates back to the end of the 7th or beginning of the 8th century.⁵² In the Archaeological Atlas of Coptic Literature database, which is currently in development, the manuscript figures as CLM 3469.⁵³ Its alternative name is TM 111691.⁵⁴ An electronic edition of the manuscript is available on the website of the Digital Edition of the Coptic Old Testament (DECOT),⁵⁵ where the Qurna Isaiah figures as sa 2028 (ID 622028). To avoid confusion with the manuscript nomenclature, based on Schüssler’s Biblia Coptica, adopted in this article, this codex will be referred to as CLM 3469. The codex has already been used in the compilation of earlier chapters of Deutero-Isaiah.⁵⁶ The text of Isa 53, which is relevant to this study, begins on page 26 of the manuscript in line 6 of the right column, and ends on page 35 in line 20 of the left column. The text is in very poor condition. Only small fragments can be read.

In order to illustrate the contents of particular manuscripts better, the occurrence of the verses from Isa 53 is presented in the table where:
- an “x” means the occurrence of the whole verse,
- an “(x)” means the occurrence of only a fragment of a given verse,
- an empty space in the table means the absence of a given verse in the manuscript.

3. The Sahidic Text of Isa 53

As in the case of the previous chapters, the following symbols have been introduced in the edition of the Coptic text:

- angle brackets indicate that the text has been completed in order to facilitate its proper understanding,
- braces indicate the scribe’s redundant letters (frequently resulting from ditto graphy),
- symbol indicates the absence of the given form in the manuscript whose number is provided beside it,
- exclamation mark in superscript suggests a more correct reading,
- symbol indicates that the letter was later added by the scribe above the line,
- symbol indicates that the letter was later added by the scribe below the line.57

The text of Isa 53 in the Sahidic dialect of the Coptic language reads as follows:

4. English Translation of Isa 53

The translation of Isa 53 from the Sahidic dialect of the Coptic language into English reads as follows:

Chapter 51

V. 1 Lord, who has believed our report? And to whom has the arm of the Lord been revealed?

V. 2 We announced before him like a child, like a root in a thirsty land; he has no form or glory, and saw him, and he had no form or beauty.

V. 3 But his form was without honor and was changed beyond all men, a man being in calamity and knowing how to bear sickness; because his face is turned away, he was dishonored and not esteemed.

V. 4  This one will bear our sins and suffers pain for us, and we ourselves accounted him to be in trouble and calamity and ill-treatment.

V. 5  But he was wounded because of our acts of lawlessness and has been weakened because of our sins; upon him are the children of our peace; by his bruise we were healed.

V. 6  All we like sheep have gone astray; a man has strayed in his own way, and the Lord gave him over to our sins.

V. 7  And he, because he has been ill-treated, did not open his mouth; like a sheep he was led to the place of his slaughter, and as a lamb is silent before the one shearing it, so he will not open his mouth.

V. 8  In his humiliation his judgment was taken away. Who will be able to describe his generation? Because his life will be taken from the earth, he was led to death from the acts of lawlessness of my people.

V. 9  And I will give the wicked for his place of burial and the rich for his place of death, because he committed no lawlessness, nor was deceit in his mouth.

V. 10  And the Lord desires to cleanse him from his blow. If you give an offering for your sins, your soul shall see a long-lived offspring. And the Lord wishes to take away from the pain of his soul

\textsuperscript{94} The omission or addition of an article does not necessarily result from the translator’s intent to interfere with the content of the work. The semantic rules frequently (especially in Coptic) determine whether a given article will be omitted.

\textsuperscript{95} The differences in word order do not always have to reflect actual changes introduced by the Coptic translator. They often depend on the syntactic rules, according to which, e.g. the direct object usually appears immediately after the verb (see Isa 41:18, 19) (cf. Layton, \textit{Coptic Grammar}, sec. 182).

\textsuperscript{96} It includes grammatical and semantic changes (e.g. number, tense, person, gender, etc.).

6. Analysis of Selected Philological Issues Encountered in Isa 53

The final part of the article is dedicated to the analysis of the most challenging philological issues encountered in the text of Isa 53. They primarily arise from differences between the Coptic manuscripts. They may also refer to the manner in which the Greek text of the Septuagint was read and translated into the Sahidic dialect. The verses requiring a brief philological commentary include:

Isa 53:2

At the beginning of the verse, the Septuagint manuscripts present two different language versions. Some of them contain the phrase ἀνέτειλε μὲν ἐναντίον αὐτοῦ (“he grew up before him”). While others open the verse with the words ἀνηγγείλαμεν ἐναντίον αὐτοῦ (“we announced before him”). A testimony of the second reading can be found in the Coptic translation ἀνωνυμεῖ την ἕπεμτο ἐβολά.

Isa 53:3

The Coptic translation εὐχοούν ἃνῃ τῆς λοσελαξ, which is a rendering of the Greek εἰδὼς φέρειν μαλακίαν (“knowing how to bear sickness”), poses some interpretive difficulties. The form of the verb ἃνῃ could be interpreted in two ways.

1) First, the Coptic letter ẖ could have been written as a shortened version of the verb ἑ. The expression ἑ τῆς λοσελαξ would therefore be a more descriptive translation of the Greek φέρειν (“to bear”) and could be understood as “to walk under suffering.” Perhaps the translator wanted to emphasize that

98 This reading is supported by both Ziegler and Rahlfs (Sequagint), who only added the final letter -v in the verb: ἀνέτειλεν. In the introduction to the Greek text of the Book of Isaiah, Ziegler states that it is uncertain which version of Isa 53:2 should be considered more original (Ziegler, Sequagint Isaias, 99).
the suffering of the Servant of the Lord was not short-lasting. However, this interpretation of the Coptic \textit{n+fi} may not be very convincing. This is because the preposition \textit{z\alpha} only occurs alongside the verb \textit{i} in the Bohairic dialect and means “come to, approach,” which usually refers to persons.\textsuperscript{99} Moreover, spelling the verb \textit{ei} as \textit{i} is characteristic of dialects such as Bohairic, Fayyumic, and Sub-akhimic. The standard form in the Sahidic dialect is always \textit{ei}.

2) Another way to interpret the \textit{n+fi} form could be to read it as a haplography. The correct spelling would be \textit{Niefi}. The conjunction \textit{n_f-} would be followed by the verb \textit{fi} in a compound with the preposition \textit{z\alpha}. The construct \textit{fi z\alpha} (“bear under, support”\textsuperscript{100}) corresponds very well to the Greek \textit{φέρειν}.

The latter solution seems to be simpler and more plausible. Since the oldest manuscript of sa 48 also contains the haplographic reading of \textit{n+fi}, we could venture to say that the copyist’s error was made at the very beginning of the manuscript tradition of the Coptic version of the Book of Isaiah and was repeated in subsequent codices.\textsuperscript{101}

\textbf{Isa 53:5}

In the verse, we encounter the Coptic phrase \textit{N\gammape N\tau\epsilon\iota\pi\iota\nuh N\betaa e\xi\omega} which is difficult to understand and which should be literally translated as: “upon him are the children of our peace.” Its closest context speaks about the suffering of the Servant of the Lord. Where does the statement “the children of our peace” come from? It is likely that the Coptic translator made a mistake by misreading the Greek noun. In the text of the Septuagint we find the term \textit{παιδεία}, which means “discipline” or “instruction.”\textsuperscript{102} It should have been translated to the Coptic language as \textit{C\beta\omega}.\textsuperscript{103} The noun \textit{παιδεία} can also mean “childhood.”\textsuperscript{104} It is likely that this meaning was taken into account by the Coptic translator who used the noun \textit{\gammape} (“son,” “child”\textsuperscript{105}), preceded by the plural definite article \textit{N\tau-}. It is therefore possible to translate the Greek \textit{παιδεία} as the Coptic \textit{N\gammape}. All manuscripts available to us contain this version of the translation. However, in the context of verses referring to the sufferings of the Servant of the Lord, the statement “upon him are the children of our peace” does not make much sense.

\textsuperscript{101} An exception here would be a late, possibly 14th century, lectionary sa 108\textsuperscript{8}, in which we find the spelling \textit{Ne\epsiloni}.

Isa 53:6

A subtle difference can be observed between the Greek and the Coptic texts, which results from the use of the verb πλανάω in different grammatical forms. The Septuagint reads it in the passive form ἐπλανήθη, which suggests that it was man who went astray (literally “has been strayed,” “allowed himself to be strayed”) in his way. The Coptic translation uses the verb ΠΛΑΝΑ, which can be interpreted as the active form. This makes man not the object but the subject of the act of straying. The Coptic text, therefore, suggests that man himself was responsible for his straying.

Isa 53:8

In Ziegler’s critical apparatus, we find a remark suggesting that the Sahidic text does not translate the Greek τοῦ λαοῦ μου (“of my people”) precisely, as it omits the possessive pronoun μου. This remark agrees with the manuscript of sa 48 and sa 108, in which we indeed find the phrase ΜΠΛΑΟC (“of the people”). Witnesses such as 212:9, sa 211, and our manuscript sa 52, however, read it as ΜΠΛΑΛΑΟC, which corresponds exactly to the version provided in the Septuagint. Ziegler’s remark: “[μου] > Co(Sa)” does not apply to our manuscript.

Isa 53:10

Different editions of the Septuagint offer different ways of breaking down verses 10 and 11. In Alfred Rahlfs’s edition, which is the basis for the NETS translation, verse 10 ends with the words: καὶ βούλεται κύριος ἀφελεῖν (“and the Lord wishes to take away”). In Ziegler’s edition, verse 10 includes these additional words: ἀπὸ τοῦ πόνου τῆς ψυχῆς αὐτοῦ (“from the pain of his soul”). As our compilation is based on Ziegler’s edition, we will rely on his breakdown of the verses.

Isa 53:12

The Coptic translation contains one of the longest additions to the Greek text in the entire book of Deutero-Isaiah: ΑΥΠΩΤ ΕΧΩΥ ΛΘ ΕΑΔΙΩΚΕ ΜΜΟΥ ΑΥΩΟΥΨ · ΛΘ ΑΠΧΟΕΙΚ ΚΘ ΝΑΥ ΕΒΟΑ (“They ran against him and persecuted him and seized him. But the Lord forgave them”). Ziegler remarked that a similar text is to be found on the margin of the Greek manuscript numbered 86: κατεδραμον και εδιωξαν συνελαβον και κυριος αφηκεν αυτοις (“They ran and persecuted and seized. But the Lord forgave them”). Since it is a minuscule manuscript, it could not have been the basis for the earlier Coptic translations, such as manuscript sa 48, dated to the 4th or 5th century.\textsuperscript{108} Did the reverse process take place? Was the remark on the margin of manuscript 86 added on the basis of the Coptic manuscripts? What was the Vorlage of manuscript 86? Answering these questions would require a more detailed study of this Greek manuscript. Undoubtedly, expanding the final verse of the Fourth Song of the Servant of the Lord was intended to establish an even closer link between the Old Testament song to the person of Jesus Christ. This explanation can also be found in Ziegler’s critical apparatus, where the added words are treated as a Christian addition: “additamentum christ.”

Summing up the above analyses, it should be first noted that the Fourth Song of the Servant of the Lord is to be found in a relatively large number of Coptic manuscripts. Beside our sa 52 we encounter it in seven other witnesses. A comparison of the Sahidic manuscripts does not show any great discrepancies between them. Many discrepancies result merely from different vocalisations. The manuscripts usually provide a faithful translation of the Greek Septuagint. The only major difference in relation to LXX is to be found at the end of the Song. The Coptic witnesses add the following text there: “They ran against him and persecuted him and seized him. But the Lord forgave them.” It is most likely that this final addition indicates the reading of the Fourth Song in the key of Christian interpretation.
